Fascists against the war

In his evidence to a Home Affairs Select Committee last November, Searchlight magazine publisher, Gerry Gable was quoted as saying "Anti-war rallies had attracted Fascists". Unusually for Searchlight this particular statement is actually true. Fascists are genuinely concerned that British soldiers are once again being sacrificed in a foreign land on behalf of Zionist interests. We are proud to oppose Blair's war and will continue to do so.

How much lower will Labour stoop?

When they first got elected to government two of New Labour's selling points to a naive electorate were family values and open and transparent government. But David Blunkett has exposed both of these values as meaningless to New Labour. Not only does he engage in an adulterous affair with a married woman, and please note although Blunkett is single, an adulterer is also ... he who invades and destroys the marriage of another, and then he conveniently forgets the help he gave to his lover in obtaining a resident's visa for his lover's Filipino nanny. All through this period Prime Minister Blair puts a comforting arm around the adulterer and declares his undying support for him.

A great way to demonstrate support for family values!

In the follow up to Blunkett's affair with Mrs Kimberly Quinn, it would seem Mrs Quinn, being the friendly woman she undoubtedly is, was conducting several other affairs behind the back of her husband. This is probably the reason Mrs Quinn, formerly known as Kimberly Fortier, resigned from the board of the Jewish Community Centre for London. She was just too busy!

Overseas Aid: Money well spent?

Our Overseas Aid Minister, Hilary Benn spends much of his time justifying the vast amounts of British taxpayer's money that is given to Africa in overseas aid. So can he explain how the King of Swaziland, Mswati the third, can afford to buy himself a Daimler-Chrysler limousine with a 21 speaker sound system, a built in champagne chiller and a DVD player for £370,000, when his aids-stricken country only manages to survive on food aid provided by countries like Britain?

Selective apologies

The day after the bodies of ten British servicemen killed in Iraq were returned to Britain Prime Minister Blair issued a public apology to eleven Irish republicans and their families for the miscarriage of justice that took place after the IRA bombed pubs in Guilford and Woolwich. The men were tried and found guilty but were released after a successful appeal. How much longer will the British people have to wait for Blair to apologise for taking Britain into a war with Iraq on the basis of the lie that they had weapons of mass destruction?

A lesson for Livingstone

London Mayor, Ken Livingstone must have been amazed at the hostile reaction his comments to a Jewish newspaper reporter created. One lesson he has surely learned, who really holds the power in Britain.

BRITISH NATIONALISM ...

Another Split on the way?

JOHN TYNDALL REPLIES ...

In our last issue we expressed concerns that the British National Party could be heading for a split following the decision of its leadership to expel from membership the founder and former Chairman, John Tyndall. A copy of our article was sent to Nick Griffin and John Tyndall with an invitation to comment on our speculation. As we go to print, only John Tyndall has taken the trouble to reply.

John Tyndall writes ... The question of whether the increase in the profile of the BNP and in the number of its councillors have been due to leadership changes and changes in policy stances, or simply to changes in the national political climate, is a matter of very lively debate in the party. Naturally, my own view of this is bound to be thought of as biased, and so I will desist from expressing it. However, leaving this aside, whatever view one takes, surely anyone should agree that it is intolerable that dissent and criticism in the party are virtually outlawed and that people can be expelled for expressing such things. That is the crucial issue here. Those who believe that Mr Griffin has brought improvements to the party will surely still acknowledge this. He and his policies are not above criticism.

My position remains as it always has been; there will be no new party, no rival to the BNP.

If these people get away with expelling me, another person will stand against Griffin for the leadership, and if that person wins the whole business of my expulsion will be put under review.

You are wrong in saying that there are no leadership elections in the BNP – at least as far as the constitution is concerned. (We didn't say that. Editor). The constitution provides for them. What Mr Griffin has done is circumvent the constitution by expelling his main rival. Whether he could get away with it with another rival remains to be seen.

One final comment I have, and this is that I am by no means desperate to be BNP leader again. I would be quite happy to support some younger person for the job. However, as a result of 'bitter experience' I have come to have absolutely no confidence in Nick Griffin as leader – whether from the standpoint of his political judgement or his personal character. At the moment there is no such younger person both qualified and willing to challenge for the job, and therefore I am doing so. Fortunately, due to a long-practised disciplined lifestyle I am considerably more youthful than my years, and can still take on a task requiring energy and stamina.

We would like to thank Mr Tyndall for his reply, and take comfort from his assurances that he has no intention of orchestrating a split within the BNP. In electoral terms, the party is the best chance, at the moment, for Britons to regain control of our country. The task is onerous enough; our enemies are powerful, well financed and well-organised. They will only be defeated by a party which is unified, strong and totally dedicated to rescuing Britain from those who are determined to destroy her from within. "Unity is Strength" is not a motto solely of the left, it needs to be our motto too. Together we must march towards victory. Nothing less will do!

We must secure the existence of our people and a future for white children

Our offer remains open to Mr Griffin or Mr Lecomber to air their viewpoints on the current situation with Mr Tyndall and the leadership of the British National Party.

BNP Student Leader Acquitted on Assault Charge

The British National Party's National Student Organiser, Tony Wentworth has been acquitted of assault charges by Salford Magistrates Court.

Mr Wentworth, a fulltime student at Salford University was distributing BNP leaflets when a known left-wing extremist, Chris Tavner attempted to attack Mr Wentworth and take his leaflets. Mr Wentworth vigorously defended himself sending Mr Tavner crying to the police that he had been assaulted. The police arrested Mr Wentworth and charged him with common assault.

Mr Gleeson objected to the BNP wreath and caused it some damage. He was immediately arrested by the most senior police officer in Oldham who was attending the memorial ceremony and charged with criminal damage.

In court Mr Tavner, who is closely allied to the SWP, admitted that there had been a campaign by the extreme-left aimed at Mr Wentworth (see ANL leaflet pictured right) admitted that he held the opinion that BNP members should not be allowed to study at university, nor should they be allowed to stand in elections. The magistrates found Mr Wentworth not guilty of common assault and in doing so confirmed that BNP members and indeed anyone else has the right to defend themselves from unprovoked attacks.

The British National Party website, www.bnp.org.uk came under attack from a computer hacker in the latter part of last year causing the party some embarrassment. The hacker also attacked other websites in Britain as well as the USA. Now following an extensive investigation by both the FBI and the Hi-Tech Computer Crime Unit in Britain, an unnamed 27 year-old male has been arrested at his home in North-East Scotland and charged with several offences under the Misuse of Computer Act 1990.

last war and the millions murdered by Communists throughout the world.

While London's Mayor, Ken Livingstone defends his comments about journalists and concentration camp guards as merely exercising his right to free speech, the leader of the November 9th Society was also appearing in London on another free speech issue. Kevin Quinn, the leader of the November 9th Society was appearing at the Central Criminal Court with others, charged with ten offences of incitement to commit racial hatred. The charges relate to a publication called "Stormer" and the publishing or distributing a booklet entitled "The Longest Hatred". It is worth noting that the prosecution also consider it an offence to actually be in possession of the booklet which was first published by Lady Jane Birdwood in 1991.

Asian admits Synagogue bomb hoax

Riaz Burahee, a 24 year-old Asian from Edmonton, North London pleaded guilty to one count of communicating a bomb hoax in March 2004 which led to a local synagogue being evacuated. Burahee also admitted ten charges of making abusive telephone calls to several London synagogues. A further five charges were ordered to remain on file.

It will be interesting to see how Searchlight publisher, Gerry Gable explains this case having told a Home Office Select Committee last November that the Jewish community was under increased attack from the "far-right". Will now Gable claim that Riaz Burahee was an undercover member of the BNP?

National Front Hold London Marches to Honour the Forgotten Victims of Racial Violence

With superb timing and a massive effort by dedicated members, the National Front managed to hold two marches on the same day through two different parts of London, to honour the forgotten victims of racial violence.

Widely advertised as a Campaign of Remembrance the first of the NF's marches took place in Woolwich, South-East London where party members marched to the spot where white teenager Terry Gregory was murdered in a racial attack. A group of about 40 left-wing extremists from the Socialist Workers Party and Respect attempted to physically stop the march but their efforts were thwarted by the police. However, in an attempt to placate the demonstrators the police banned the NF from exhibiting the Union flag during the march but it was allowed to be flown and then dipped during a minutes silence held in memory of this young victim of racial violence.

A floral tribute in the shape of a question mark was laid at the spot where the murder took place.

RIP Terry Gregory

This sad task over, the NF marchers crossed the river Thames over to East London. On arrival at Plaistow station a police welcoming committee advised the NF that there were several large groups of left-wing extremists gathered along the march route and it could be dangerous. As expected, this did not deter the NF and with union flags held high they made their way defiantly to the spot where teenager Ashley Hedger had been stabbed to death by Asian thugs.

As they approached the scene of the murder police advised that because of the increasing violence of the communist demonstrators, only four NF members would be allowed to place a floral tribute on the spot where Ashley had died.

Incredibly, in the same city that has a permanent memorial to the death of black teenager Steven Lawrence, police officers had to escort NF delegates, led by Deputy Chairman, Bernard Franklin through a hate filled crowd so as they could lay their floral tribute to a young white victim.

DRESDEN

The Holocaust they still deny!

Photograph from Apocalypse 1945. The Destruction of Dresden by David Irving

On the evening of February 13th 1945 244 Lancaster bombers and 9 escorting fighter planes took off from an RAF bases in the South of England, their target, the city of Dresden. When at 2130 hours the air raid sirens sounded the citizens of this ancient city in Eastern Germany were not to know that for most of them this was their last day on earth. Barely thirty minutes later, at 2200 hours the first of the pathfinder incendiary bombs exploded on the outskirts of the city and within another thirty-minutes the entire inner city was engulfed in a firestorm that would eventually destroy almost the entire population. Over the next 24 hours some 500 planes, RAF and USAF dropped 650,000 incendiary bombs, 1,800 high explosive bombs on the densely populated city centre. Later raids increased the saturation bombing area to 9 square miles of the city. An estimated 85% of the city was totally destroyed in just over one day.

Both Winston Churchill and Air Marshall Arthur "Bomber" Harris defended the attack on the grounds that Dresden was an important military target, but it must be noted that even after the immense firestorm, industrial areas, the airport and the military headquarters in Albertstadt were largely undamaged. Churches, hospitals and civilian homes took the brunt of the attack and the casualties.

The deliberate bombing of civilian targets was illegal under international law. Dresden was a War Crime!

Military historians are still uncertain who devised the firestorm strategy. Certainly the British Prime Minister, Winston Churchill had advocated unrestricted bombing of enemy cities as far back as 1914 when he was British Armaments Minister. Then Churchill planned a 1000 bomber raid on Berlin which was a symbolic rather than a military target.

It must be remembered that at the start of the war, Germany only used air power to support attacking ground troops. Civilians were never a deliberate target. The "blitzkrieg" concept involved air attacks on military targets immediately followed with a swift driving in behind the air strikes by ground forces.

The deliberate bombing of civilian targets was illegal under international law. It was a War Crime!

In August 1940, Churchill achieved his long held ambition and bombed Berlin. Germany retaliated by bombing London. The shocking results of the London raid prompted Josef Goebbels, the German Propaganda Minister to state "the city resembles hell".

In 1941, Charles Portal of the British Air Staff advocated that entire cities and towns should be bombed, an idea willingly adopted by the head of Bomber Command, Arthur "Bomber" Harris in 1942. On their entry to the war in Europe, the US Chiefs of Staff agreed that the way to eliminate an important factory was to eliminate the city and people. No workers, no factory was their argument. The development and use of the "firestorm" concept seemed to come from Bomber Harris and his technical advisors. It was suggested that the use of massive amounts of incendiary bombs made from magnesium and phosphorus, would do more damage in the historic city centres than high explosive. The fires would take hold of the ancient timber buildings and spread rapidly from street to street. There was no need to attack a specific target as the entire area would be destroyed. In addition it was scientifically calculated that if enough incendiaries were used on the core of the target then the air above the target would become extremely hot and effectively create a vacuum on the ground causing mass suffocation. Cold air would then rush in at ground level to fill the vacuum and the result would be a "flashover" which would incinerate any living thing. Secret tests were held at a purpose built American test site to develop the correct formula for creating such a firestorm.

Dresden was the proof of the success of these tests!

Even today the official death toll is unknown. The city was flooded with refugees fleeing the advancing Red Army.

Certainly the accepted population exceeded 600,000 men women and children. Today, the German authorities, still ever sensitive to upsetting the allies claim 35,000 died in the raids. Historians put the figure nearer 135,000 but concede it could have been as high as 400,000 all in one 24 hours period!

A British bomber pilot who took part in the raids commented some years later, "the attack on Dresden was punitive .. the city as a military target was of secondary importance".

This seems close to the truth. With the Russian army less than 100 miles away Dresden was insignificant to the overall outcome of the war. Ten of thousands or hundreds of thousands of people were killed whose death did not save a single drop of allied blood.

On the 27th of January every year we are asked to remember the Holocaust. The Holocaust of Dresden on February 13th should be remembered in every country in Europe. If only as a reminder that never again should European brother fight against European brother.

Never Again!

Freedom of Information Act reveals Russians blocked Hess release

Secret documents newly released under Britain's Freedom of Information Act show that British authorities made several attempts to free Rudolf Hess from Spandau prison but were blocked by Russia's communist government.

Hess, a hero in the First World War was an active nationalist in various groups in the immediate aftermath of the German defeat in 1918. After becoming a Freikorps volunteer and a member of the secretive Thule society Hess eventually joined the fledgling NSDAP as member number 16 in July 1920 and rapidly rose to become deputy to the leader, Adolf Hitler. Hess and Hitler became close Comrades after they were both imprisoned in Landsberg prison following the failed Munich putsch on the 9th of November 1923.

On the 10th of May 1941 Hess flew solo to Britain in an attempt to secure an Anglo-German peace deal but, instead of considering the proposals which would have saved hundreds of thousands of British and German lives, the British government imprisoned Hess until after the war.

In 1946, at the Nuremberg war trials, held by the victors over the vanquished, Hess was sentenced to life imprisonment for "Crimes against peace" having been found not guilty of the more serious charge of "Crimes against humanity" which would have attracted the death sentence. (It must be noted that historical records of the trial show that the Russian judge actually proposed the death sentence for Hess). Hess was transferred to Spandau prison in the British controlled section of Berlin.

Agreement was reached between the four occupying powers, Britain, France, Russia and the USA that each would take turn in guarding Hess. As early as 1948, an American journalist, Constantine Brown complained to the authorities about the inhumane treatment of the prisoners in Spandau. In his letters he claims they are being subjected to "torture". In 1966, when the former Hitler Youth leader, Baldur von Schirach, and the former armament minister, Albert Speer were released from Spandau, Hess remained alone.

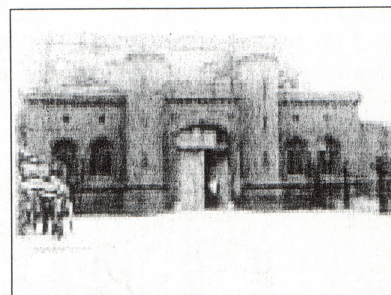

The Russians are "inflicting mental torture on the prisoner".

With support in the outside gaining for the "Prisoner of Peace" the Russian military authorities tried to make Hess's life as uncomfortable as possible. During their period of guarding the prison the Russian governor insisted Hess's reading glasses be taken from him between 10pm and 7am every night thus preventing Hess from passing time by reading. The Russians restricted his access to the open air, particularly the prison garden and restricted the issue of writing materials to the prisoner.

Official records show that the severity of Hess's treatment by the Russians prompted written complaints by a member of the British Military authorities to the British ambassador in Bonn. In one letter he accuses the Russians of "inflicting of mental torture on the prisoner". In another he comments with some irony that although assigned as Hess's gaolers, the British had also "adopted the role of his protectors against the grosser Russian violations of his minimal privileges".

In 1974, the governments of Britain, France and the USA asked Russia to agree to Hess's release. The Russians refused.

Correspondence, newly-released under the Act also reveals that about the same time the Queen replied personally to the then German Chancellor, Willi Brandt stating that Britain was doing all it could to free Hess. Unfortunately it was never to be. Hess spent a total of 46 years as a prisoner, 40 of them in Spandau (pictured above) and his final 23 years in solitary confinement.

On the 17th of August 1987 Hess was murdered by persons unknown in a faked suicide. His ashes were buried in the family plot in Wunsiedel, Bavaria. Perhaps in years to come more documents will be released identifying the murderers and their motive.

Crisis Britain

STOP Immigration and START Repatriation

A sure sign that a General Election is in the offing is when the major parties start talking tough on immigration. The Tories, who sacked Enoch Powell for expressing concerns about immigration figures are promising quotas on future numbers of immigrants, and New Labour, who have done nothing to stop the invasion of Britain by immigrants, both legal and illegal, in the eight years since they took power are now promising a massive crackdown on both legal and illegal immigrants. But are sterner measures called for?

Home Secretary reveals his true views on immigration to Labour activists

CLARKE: WE WANT MORE REFUGEES

CHARLES Clarke has insisted he wants more people to seek refuge in Britain.

The Home Secretary said it was a 'moral and legal duty' to encourage asylum seekers and economic migrants. His remarks, to Labour activists, were seized on by opponents as wrecking one of Tony Blair's key General Election pledges - 'Your country's borders protected'.

Unveiling it only last Friday, the Prime Minister said his party should no longer be seen as soft on migration. But Tory home affairs spokesman David Davis said last night that the promise had been 'completely undermined' by Mr Clarke. There were also fears that the Home Secretary's remarks will encourage millions to think Britain's borders are wide open. Mr Clarke's approval of higher immigration came in response to party activists who complained about the election pledge. He told a meeting in Gateshead that the economy of London, in particular, 'utterly depends' on migration and that he wanted Britain to be a place which offered 150,000 were issued. These overseas workers are normally allowed to bring their immediate family with them and after four years they are granted "permanent right to remain" status, with full citizenship rights. So, 150,000 overseas workers, each with four additional family members equals 750,000 extra people every year, who will almost automatically become British citizens every four years.

These figures are in addition to the estimated one million illegal immigrants and bogus asylum seekers that have arrived in the past couple of years. Even the Blair government have publicly accepted that if immigration is allowed to continue at the present levels Britain's population will increase by five million, ie: five times the population of Birmingham every ten years.

The Trade Unions, New Labour's paymasters, actually oppose any restrictions on immigration. As British jobs flow overseas to cheap labour counties such as India and Pakistan, British union leaders actually welcome large numbers of immigrants into Britain. Employers must love this position. A chance to employ workers at non-union rates, minimum wages if they are lucky, and the unions actually encourage this madness!

Both Labour and the Tories have argued that immigrants are needed to fill "skill shortages". But such shortages are easily overcome with training schemes, generous student grants - not loans, and reasonable wages. "Our National Health Service could not function without immigrants" is an argument that will be put at election time. But reasonable pay for nurses and reasonable hours of work for hospital doctors can be easily achieved. Children's nannies from the Philippines are not necessary for the economic growth of Britain despite what David Blunkett might think.

So, Britain is in trouble. Our culture and identity are under threat from mass immigration. So what can be done?

Stop Immigration

The recently enlarged European Union can supply Britain with most of its labour and skills needs until a robust training programme can be implemented with grants aimed at skills needed. The British taxpayer should fund future doctors, nurses and engineers etc at the expense of those that wish to study graphics, art and social studies.

We must tell the EU that citizens from their countries will only be welcome in Britain if they were born in Europe. Too many EU countries have given third world immigrants resident's rights that we need to restrict entry to Britain by those that could endanger either our culture or identity.

Student visa applications from third-world countries, the Commonwealth and Africa should be stopped immediately.

Britain doesn't need them!

Blair promises to restrict immigration but his Home Secretary reveals New Labour are lying to the electorate.

Nobody can dispute the numbers of immigrants now living in Britain because nobody knows how many there are! Tory immigration controls were weak and since New Labour took control the floodgates have been open. Every year over one million visas are issued for visitors and students but nobody knows how many of these leave after their visas have expired! No records are kept! There are an estimated 50,000 sham marriages in London each year so as those who have overstayed their visas can stay in Britain legally. In just two years, 2002 and 2003 almost 10,000 unaccompanied children were smuggled into Britain. Local councils have to find about £300 a week to support the children, every week until they are 16. The government does reimburse most of the money to the local authorities via the British taxpayer. Money that should be used to build hospitals and schools. Every year since Blair became Prime Minister, the number of work permits granted to overseas workers has increased. Last year almost

Work permits should no longer be issued. Train British and European workers instead.

Withdraw from the 1951 UN convention on Refugees. This is not as dramatic as it might sound. If Britain can take part in a war against Iraq, despite such a war being declared "illegal" by the General-Secretary of the UN, then we can refuse to accept any more refugees.

Allow citizenship rights only to those born in Britain. "Special leave to remain" could still be used in genuine cases, such as those fleeing genuinely repressive regimes such as Zimbabwe, but these refugees like all others must be willing to return to their country of birth once it is safe to do so.

Voluntary Repatriation

With the election of a nationalist government the "fear factor" created by the opposition parties and for so long nourished by the race relations industry, will actually work in our favour. For years the opposition have built the lie that nationalists will reintroduce concentration camps and terrorise Britain's ethnic minority population that many will leave Britain voluntarily rather than take a chance. Others will quickly realise that their gravy-train days are over and move to a "softer billet". A nationalist Britain could easily afford to pay the fares of those wishing to leave voluntarily and for the less well off a small relocation payment could be appropriate. Perhaps we could even get EU funding for such a project?

Positive Action

While all of the above measures above will stop our Island being further overrun by immigrants what measures can we adopt to get our country back?

Introduce legislation making "un-British" activities illegal. The former Metropolitan police chief, Sir John Stevens stated that there are over 200, or possibly more, people living in Britain who have been trained in terrorism by Muslim extremists. Every week extremists whose ethnic home is outside of Britain preach hatred against our country. Charge them with Un-British activities and if found guilty deport them immediately!

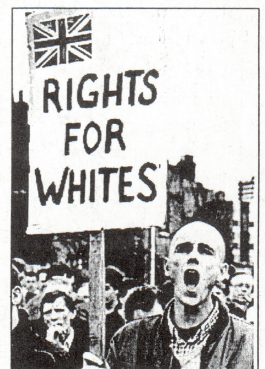

Deport Illegal immigrants and bogus asylum seekers back to their last port of call. A fairly simple procedure. Illegals caught arriving in a lorry from France should be deported back to France on the next boat. Those already here who have been granted asylum should be deported back to their countries of origin as soon as it is safe to do so. Believe or not we still have tens of thousands of immigrants in Britain from the Balkans. Albanians and Kosovans make up the largest number of these despite their homelands are now so safe that thousands of Britons take their summer holidays there!

Scrap Commonwealth privileges. Former British colonies that have gained independence should have no special privileges when it comes to entering Britain.

Deport criminals. Every day immigrants and asylum seekers are caught breaking our laws. Murder, theft, rape, drugs, people trafficking, prostitution and pimping are all offences that should be dealt with by prison then automatic deportation. Cases of death by dangerous driving and drinking and driving offences committed by immigrants have dramatically increased over the past couple of years and should warrant immediate deportation.

Britons must harden their hearts to the liberals who will plead "special" cases by the ton. Petitions as to why poor little Mohammed, who arrived in Britain unable even to speak our language but is now doing so well in school and should not be deported must be ignored. If Mohammed and his family arrived in Britain from a country that it is now safe to return to, then they must go!

As the General Election gets nearer both Labour and the Tories will promise more and more sterner measures to combat the immigration crisis. But promises are all they are, their combined track record shows them up for the liars they are. In fact, sources from within the Labour party are saying that back benchers and party activists have been promised there will be an amnesty extended to all illegal immigrants in Britain by an incoming Labour government. That's one promise they will keep!

Inevitably the race relations industry will make out our plans to be just a matter of skin colour.

Race Relations supremo, Trevor Phillips has already claimed the Tory plans are "about keeping out people who are of a different colour or different culture".

Well Trevor, we British nationalists advocate one step further, we've had enough, we're taking our country back!

OVERSEAS NEWS

German Nationalists plan Berlin march and rally over campaign of lies.

BERLIN: German nationalists are planning to hold a march and rally in the German capital on May 8th to protest against the continuing campaign of lies that has been directed against the wartime German armed forces since the end of WW2.

This May will mark the 60th anniversary of the ending of the war and the beginning of a 60 year campaign of "liberation lies". The march will be led by the Nationaldemokratische Partei Deutschlands (NPD) and will finish with a rally to be held at the city's most famous landmark, the Brandenburg Gate.

NPD speakers will call upon Germans to "end the cult of guilt" which Germany has adopted since the end of the war, and an end to the campaign of "lies and vilification" that has been directed against many ex-servicemen.

Paul Spiegel, leader of the Central Council of Jews in Germany condemned the planned march as being "provocative" as it is to be held on the same day as the latest Berlin Holocaust memorial is due to be dedicated, also close to the Brandenburg Gate.

The President of Germany's Constitutional Court, Hans-Juergen Papier, has warned that a fresh attempt to ban the NPD could succeed despite a bid to ban the party failing in 2003. The Judge reminded a national newspaper that the proceedings against the nationalist party had only been suspended.

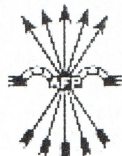

SAXONY: Twelve NPD members of the Saxony state parliament walked out of a debate about the Holocaust when the speaker refused to include the bombing of Dresden into the debate. The NPD members walked out as the Speaker called for a minutes silence to remember victims of the Holocaust. The NPD won almost 10% of the vote in state parliament elections last year and are expected to win seats in the Westphalia state parliament elections in May. The party have led a national campaign to get war-crimes committed against the German people recognised.

KIEL: Seven-thousand extreme-left and Jewish demonstrators tried to storm a meeting being held by the NPD in the city centre recently. As riot police arrested 46 demonstrators their comrades turned their frustration against the local community by vandalising and looting local shops. The 450 NPD members continued their meeting unaffected by the rioters.

SPAIN

Socialist Spain plans to sanitise its historical past

Spain's Socialist government has decided to sanitise its proud Patriotic past by ordering all reminders of the Franco era to be erased from public buildings.

Almost 30 years since the death of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, the Fascist leader who saved Spain from Communist tyranny, thousands of public buildings of the era still have Fascies and Falangist symbols adorning them. Statues of Franco still exist in major cities such as Madrid and Santander and throughout the country many streets and town squares are still named after the Spanish saviour.

One target for sanitisation is bound to be The Valley of the Fallen, (pictured left) a huge monument dedicated to the defeat of International Communism by patriotic Fascists and Falangists in the Spanish Civil war. The monument is topped by a 500 foot stone cross which can be seen from 30 miles away. Every November 20th the Valley becomes a place of pilgrimage for tens of thousands of Fascists commemorating Franco's death.

The overtly political decision has been condemned by Spanish nationalists and Spanish historians who feel that the government is trying to sanitise a period of history that Spain should be proud to acknowledge.

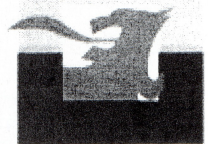

FLANDERS

Vlaams Nationalist MEPs abstain from Auschwitz resolution

Three Euro MPs from the Flemish nationalist Vlaams Belang party abstained from a vote in the European Parliament on a resolution that linked Holocaust Day to "Jews in Europe experiencing a heightened sense of security due to anti-Semitism". VB President, Frank Vanhecke, commented that his party had abstained from the vote as they feared the resolution "would be used against parties who fight for European values and European peoples".

Seven other Euro MEPs also abstained from voting.

Vlaams Belang was formed at the latter part of last year after a Belgian Court sensationally outlawed the main Flemish Party, Vlaams Blok on the grounds that it was "racist". Sceptics have suggested that the party, established in 1977 was growing too popular for the liberal Belgian establishment having attracted almost 27% of the Flemish vote in the last elections. Vlaams Belang advocates the dissolution of the Belgian state and the establishment of a Flemish state in the Dutch speaking part of Belgium. The party classifies itself as a "nationalist party of the right" and puts the need to "preserve the cultural identity and the national interests of the Flemish people" as a major objective.

Tens of Thousands Commemorate Dresden Holocaust

February 13th : DRESDEN: EAST GERMANY: Tens of thousands of Germans, young and old, assembled in Dresden, East Germany to commemorate the 60th anniversary of the allied bombing attacks on the city in February 1945, which killed up to half a million men women and children.

Official events to commemorate the night of terror that many still consider to be a war crime included church services, wreath laying ceremonies and a "peace run". Ambassadors and politicians from the former Allied powers laid wreaths at the Heidefriedhof cemetery where 20,000 of the victims are buried. A "peace run" consisting of sixty athletes, representing one for each year since the attack was held in memory of those that perished in the meticulously planned firestorm. But the official event was upstaged by a march organised by the Nationaldemokratische Partei Deutschlands (NPD) which saw an estimated 10,000 nationalists marched across the river Elbe into the remains of the old city with flaming torches and martial music playing from loud speakers. As darkness gathered the flaming torches of the marchers and further across the city another 10,000 torches were lit at the official gathering basking much of the city in an eerie glow. One elderly resident commented to local media, "there are ghost of the victims here tonight, still waiting for justice". The quote was widely used in the German media.

The unofficial nationalist rally was addressed by Holger Apfel, the NPD's leader of the Saxony parliament. Mr Apfel condemned the USA for its appalling warlike record. "They have left a trail of blood throughout modern history. Dresden, Afghanistan, Iraq and possibly tomorrow, Iran. Millions have died at the hands of the USA acting on behalf of Zionist interests. We will not forgive, we will not forget". Other speakers reminded the crowd of Winston Churchill's genocidal statements calling for the massacre of German civilians. The current German government was also criticised for deliberately underestimating the number of civilians killed in the Dresden raids to appease the guilty consciences of the allies.

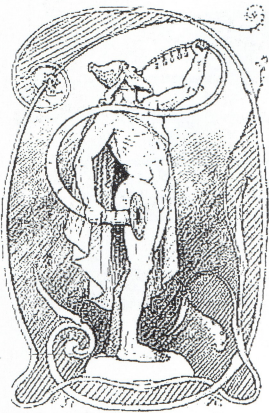

Not once in the past sixty years has Britain or the United States offered a formal apology for this atrocity, and unlike the survivors of other Holocausts no offer of reparations have ever been made to the survivors of Dresden. No wonder today's Germans vow, No Forgiving, No Forgetting.

Russia

Twenty Russian MPs have tabled a motion in the lower State parliament, the Duma, calling for an investigation into the activities of Jewish organisations in Russia who they accuse of inciting ethnic hatred and provoking anti-Semitism. The motion was designed to cause embarrassment to the Russian President Putin as it was tabled on the same day that Putin was to attend the Holocaust commemoration at the former wartime labour camp, Auschwitz which was captured by Russian troops in 1945. In a somewhat sinister statement the Israeli Foreign Minister, Silvan Shalom told Israel Radio "the Israeli government will act on every level to combat this. We do not let any group or any country live peacefully with phenomena like this".

A box of soap found in a funeral home in Magdiel was claimed to have been made from the bodies of concentration camp victims. The soap was buried under a tombstone that read "Soap of Holy People". The discovery was made by workers of a Jewish burial society. Employees of the funeral home who recalled the burial of the soap claimed the soap was engraved with writing that said the soap had been made from fat from Jewish bodies. DNA tests are to be made to establish if the soap contains human fats but a spokesman for the Holocaust authority, Yad Vashem said, "There is no proof that the Nazis ever made soap from human bodies. Over the years tests have been made on several bars of soap with similar claims and to date no soap has ever been discovered containing human fats".

Three Labour Councillors arrested over ballot fraud

www.labour.org.uk

Since the election of the Labour government in 1997 much of Britain has declined into a third-world country. True, many Britons are materially better off than the inhabitants of the third-world but, our hospitals have declined to a point where patients are more likely to die from dirt-bound infections than their original complaint, diseases such as tuberculosis, once beaten in Britain is now making a comeback in our inner cities and our once proud electoral system is being dragged down to the level of the third-world.

For over 100 years the bulwark of the British electoral system has been the secret ballot. First demanded by the Chartists in 1837 to overcome intimidation by landlords and employers, the secret ballot was finally introduced in 1872 after a campaign, which had encompassed strikes, demonstrations and even the occasional riot! Now, with the introduction of the postal ballot the secret vote has gone and elections are starting to descend to third-world levels.

The postal vote has been introduced by the Labour government and perhaps fittingly it is three Labour councillors who are facing legal action over allegations they forged thousands of postal ballot forms to get themselves elected. The case revolves around the 2004 council elections in Birmingham's Asian dominated Bordesley Green ward in which is alleged that the Labour candidates forged 3000 votes, some by using correction fluid to erase the original vote and change it to benefit themselves. It is also alleged that gangs of children were paid to snatch postal ballot forms from postmen on their rounds and Labour party activists removed postal ballots that were protruding through letterboxes of private houses. Dozens of voters told the court that when they attended polling stations to vote they were turned away because the records showed that someone had applied for a postal ballot and had cast it on their behalf! In all cases, the votes had been cast for the Labour candidates.

At the count, three boxes of postal ballot papers mysteriously appeared at the last minute. The total number of ballot papers in the boxes was 1,700, and every vote was for the Labour candidates, all had been filled in by the same blue pen and all appeared to have been completed by the same person!

Shockingly, the Bordesley Green case seems to be only the tip of the fraudulent iceberg, Birmingham's Liberal Democrats are to petition the court over allegations of "massive electoral fraud" in the nearby Aston ward, and ballot forms for several other neighbouring wards are being examined for alterations.

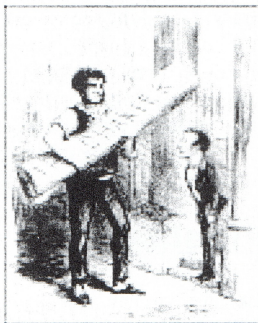

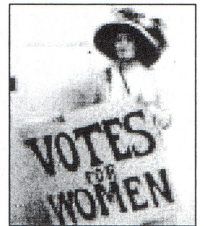

In Stoke, postal ballot forms had to be returned in the same envelope as a signed declaration. Thus, the ballot no longer was secret. Left-wing council employees tasked with opening the envelopes identified some of the voters and police are investigating complaints that some voters were later threatened because they had voted BNP. The police are also investigation allegations of electoral fraud in West Yorkshire, Cheshire, Derbyshire, Lancashire and Berkshire.

Women's groups are also raising concerns that in male-dominated Asian households, a women's right to a free vote, secured by the sacrifices of the suffragette movement in 1929 has been taken away by a combination of male dominance and New Labour! Indeed, even the Labour MP for Keighley, Ann Cryer, said that in Asian houses in her constituency fathers were filling out postal votes for the whole family.

So much for the struggles of Emily Pankhurst & co!

The secret ballot must be retained at all cost. When people lose faith in a fair and just system then democracy is the loser. The sight of paramilitary militias, so common on the streets of third-world countries during elections is not a sight we would wish to see in Britain.

Blair warns of "hundreds of terrorists in UK"

Just days after the Irish Justice Minister, Michael McDowell, publicly claimed that two Westminster MPs, Martin McGuinness and Gerry Adams were leading members of the IRA, the British Prime Minister, Tony Blair revealed that "several hundred terrorists were currently living in Britain!"

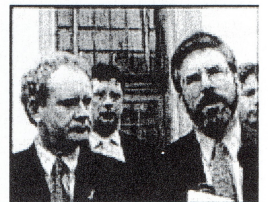

Of course Tony was not referring to his two Sinn Fein buddies, who he has entertained both at 10, Downing Street and at Chequers, but to reports from the police and security services that several hundred terrorists, believed to be mainly non-white Muslims, "are we believe are engaged in plotting or trying to commit terrorist acts in Britain".

Astonishingly, this statement was not made in parliament, but during an interview on BBC Radio 4's "Women's Hour".

Sceptics believe that Blair was making these allegations in an effort to gain support for changes in the Prevention of Terrorism Act that New Labour were pushing through parliament. Now will we see mass deportations of terrorist suspects? Not just before a General Election in which Blair is trying to entice the ethnic vote!

Blair has yet to comment on the allegations by the Irish Justice Minister that Adams and McGuinness are both members of the IRA army council and as such, responsible for the deaths of innocent people both in Ireland and the British mainland. Blair is quite happy to support George Bush in his war against global terror but for some unexplained reason seems reluctant to take positive measures against Sinn Fein/IRA.

HOLOCAUST NEWS

In case you didn't know ...

January 27th was designated "World Holocaust Day". The day was chosen to mark the liberation of the Auschwitz labour camp in wartime Poland from German control.

Perhaps alarmed by a poll that showed the majority of British teenagers knew little about the history of the Polish camp the BBC did their utmost to rectify this by throwing millions of pounds of licence fee payer's money into re-educating the public. In case you didn't know about Auschwitz and the Holocaust, the BBC broadcast no less than four Holocaust related programmes in just one week.

On Saturday the 22nd BBC2 broadcast 90 minutes of "A musical memorial from Auschwitz", the following Tuesday, BBC2 gave us "Auschwitz: The Nazis and the final solution", the next day BBC1 presented "grandchild of the Holocaust" a tale of Holocaust survival and on Thursday, Holocaust Day itself we had selected highlights of the Holocaust Remembrance Ceremony broadcast from Westminster Hall. This lavish event we were told, was partially organised (and financed?) by the BBC!

In view of his previous lapse, Prince Harry was conspicuous by his absence from this grand affair, perhaps because of his suspect dress sense.

Throughout Europe the rush was on for malleable politicians to be photographed in swirling snow at the reconstructed Auschwitz camp. Again, Prince Harry was missing, having, according to some sources, refused point blank to bow to pressure from some Jewish groups to attend and publicly atone for his sins.

Prior to Holocaust Week, the BBC screened a two-part programme about Auschwitz. Advertising the coming programme an actor intoned deeply, "I planned the buildings" then, "I operated the railway points", "I closed the doors" (to the gas chambers) etc and then the words ... "One-million, ONE hundred thousand people were killed in Auschwitz, One million of them Jews". Now remember these figures!

On Saturday the 22nd of January, advertising for BBC2s "A Music Memorial from Auschwitz" stated ... International musicians from around the world come to pay tribute to the One million, FIVE hundred thousand people who died in Auschwitz!

On the figures supplied by the BBC, Four hundred thousand extra people died in Auschwitz in the two-week gap between programmes! Historians who have questioned the accuracy of figures claimed by Holocaust propagandists have been vilified and denounced as Holocaust "deniers". But with such a variance of numbers at just one camp the search for truth must be allowed to continue!

The latest Holocaust "victim" is Professor, Bruno Gollnisch of the Jean-Moulin University in Lyon, France. Professor Gollnisch has been suspended from his post by the French education ministry after calling for a "free and open debate about the Holocaust". Professor Gollnisch is also a senior figure in the Front Nationale.

Footnote: The young Prince Harry deserves to be criticised for wearing a swastika armband on the arm of the Afrika Corps shirt he wore at a fancy dress party. The Afrika Corps never wore the armband in this way as our illustration shows.

Any further plans Prince Harry might have to wear his armband in public could be thwarted by an attempt by several German politicians to have the swastika symbol banned throughout Europe. Wolfgang Bosbach, the deputy-leader of Germany's Christian Democrats, Silvana Koch Leader of the Free Democrats and Michael Müller of the Social Democrats are to petition a meeting of the European Justice Ministers to seek such a ban. Representatives of Europe's Hindu religion have promised to fight any ban using human rights legislation on religious freedom. The swastika is a sacred symbol to Hindus (and others) and is believed to be 5000 years-old. Buddhists also revere the symbol that they believe brings good luck. Prince Harry would no doubt disagree with this.

Unknown man paints Hindu sacred peace symbol on wall

Footnote: As we were going to print we have learnt that the European Union have decided against a blanket ban on the swastika symbol but will support individual states that wish to impose their own ban. The symbol is already banned in Germany. British MEP, David Sumberg, who is Jewish, said he supported the decision not to impose a Europe-wide ban. The news was greeted with joy by Hindus and others.

NEWS UPDATE Special Supplement

Due to unavoidable delays at the printers some items mentioned in issue 64 now need to be updated. In addition, while issue 64 was at the printers "Bomber" Blair has called a General-Election.

Labour Candidates Found Guilty of Ballot Fraud Trade Union Leader Resigns

"Bomber" Blair's election took an immediate blow when the three Labour councillors from Birmingham's Bordesley Green ward arrested on allegations of ballot fraud by stealing postal ballot forms have been found guilty by a special elections court. All of the accused are of Asian origin. Criminal charges will now follow.

In a completely separate case a Labour councillor, Mohammed Hussain from Blackburn was charged with ballot fraud during council elections in which at least 233 fraudulent votes were cast for Mr Hussain giving him victory and a place on Darwen Council. At Preston Crown Court Hussain pleaded guilty to conspiracy to defraud and was jailed for three years and seven months. Judge Peter Openshaw said Hussain was in his opinion unfit to sit in public office in the future.

BNP Three Arrested

BNP Chairman, Nick Griffin, former Chairman John Tyndall and Midlands activist Mark Collett were all arrested when they reported to Halifax police station following a BBC undercover documentary "Secret Agent" made in March last year. At Leeds Crown Court Mr Griffin and Mr Tyndall were charged with two offences under Britain's race hate laws and Mr Collett with four offences. All were released on bail. A large demonstration by BNP supporters was held outside the police station and later the Court building.

Government Clampdown on African Immigrants

As the Prime Minister as the Queen to dissolve parliament and trigger the next General-Election, the government simultaneously announced that they were launching a clampdown on illegal immigration and as a first measure thousands of Nigerians would be denied visas to enter Britain as tourists or students. Last year over 120,000 six-month stay visas were issued to Nigerians but almost none have returned home after their visas expired. This year they have been 23,000 visa applications per month from Nigerian nationals wishing to "visit" Britain. Sceptics have suggested if Labour wins another term of office the restrictions will be lifted.

Kevin Curran, the General-Secretary of the GMB union has resigned following his suspension from office over ballot-rigging allegations. Mr Curran devoted much of his time as General-Secretary conducting a "witch-hunt" against union members whose political beliefs did not meet Mr Curran's approval. BNP members were the main target.

Tory supports Israel's "wall of shame"

Nicholas Boles, the Conservative candidate for Hove & Portslade constituency in Sussex declared his support for the massive wall erected by Israel on Palestinian territory when he addressed a meeting of the Conservative Friends of Israel group. Despite the wall being declared illegal by the United Nations, Mr Boles told the 70 strong audience that he supported Israel's right to decide if the wall was necessary. Mr Boles also pledged to lobby the local council to help fund a project to provide security cameras for the local synagogue.

SWP targets Oona King in Bow

The Socialist Workers Party, hiding behind the newly established Respect party is hoping to unseat Blair "Babe" Oona King from her Bethnal Green and Bow constituency. Standing against the pro-war Labour MP is George Galloway who has already fought a successful libel case against Ms King and hopes to take her seat as well. Galloway is hoping to win the support of the majority Muslim population of the area. The SWP are devoting all of their East London resources to this one campaign leaving Respect candidates in nearby Camden and Hackney to fend for themselves.

Respect won a council seat in the area in the last local elections.

Germany Holocaust charges against NPD leader are dropped

The German authorities have decided not to prosecute NPD leader Udo Voigt over remarks made in the Saxony Parliament describing the firebombing attacks on Dresden in February 1945 as "as a bombing Holocaust". This remark, plus another which described the Allies as "mass murderers" prompted a walkout at the Parliament by several left-wing politicians who later called for a prosecution to be mounted under Germany's hate laws. The Hamburg Public Prosecutor investigated the complaint and ruled against any charges commenting "Using the term 'Bombing Holocaust' for the bombing of Dresden in the Second World War is not a punishable offence".

Herr Voigt welcomed the ruling with the statement, "The term Holocaust was as appropriate for the destruction of Jews as it was for that of the Germans".

Not surprisingly, the legal ruling was condemned by the President of the Central Council of Jews in Germany, Paul Spiegel who felt that a prosecution should have been mounted on moral grounds thus bringing moral behaviour into the German legal system.

Austria Haider Starts New Party

Charismatic Austrian nationalist, Jorg Haider has left the Freedom Party of which he was a founder member to launch a new Austrian nationalist party Alliance for the Future of Austria. Herr Haider and his sister, Ursula Haubner will resume their places in the Austrian coalition government under the Alliance banner.

The Freedom Party has suffered a series of major setbacks including several attempts to split the party and is now likely to be wound up.

United States University Professor Fired Over NS Beliefs

Jacques Pluss, a Professor teaching Western Civilisation at the Fairleigh Dickinson University in New Jersey has been sacked from his post following his admission that he belonged to the National Socialist Movement. Professor Pluss is to sue his former employers claiming discrimination and infringing his constitutional rights. It would appear that the university are quite willing to employ staff who supports Zionism, a form of Israeli Supremacism.

Russia Chess champion calls for ban on Zionist groups

The former chess Grandmaster, Boris Spassky is leading a group of prominent Russians in demanding that the government ban several extremist religious and Zionist organisations. A petition containing the signatures of 5000 of Russia's most influential people, including MP's and high ranking officials from the Russian Orthodox church has been presented to the Prosecutor General. Spassky and his colleagues accuse the groups of "fostering anti-Russian ideals" and "promoting anti-Russian activities". A second letter to the legal authorities demands the prosecution of named individuals who are responsible for financing the activities of the offending groups.

Netherlands Dutch Nationalists hold "Educational day"

Dutch nationalists held an "educational day" event to warn their fellow countrymen of "the danger of Zionism". The event was organised by the newly-formed Nationale Alliantie (national alliance) party and was attended by some two-hundred people. Threatened violence by Dutch anti-Fascists never materialised possibly due to the event being defended by uncompromising activists from the Flemish Blood & Honour network, B&HV. Leaders of Holland's Jewish community claimed that the event, which was held two days after Holocaust day was "provocative".
